THE PACIFIC Commercial Advertiser.

All's for the Best.

Let the angels take her! In God's acre, Dust to dust, Can we thus forsake her? Ay, we must! we must Here no sound will wake her;

Here's the blossom tender! Earth, defend her; Gentle rest On thy bosom lend her; Warm, and Soger-prest, Mine no more will send her Slumbers soft and blest.

Here we lay God's trust.

III. This is ours no longer! Death is stronger Than our love : Will the stranger wrong her? Her! why, she's above, Where God's scraphs throng her: the, our household dove!

IV. Tis our home's undoing, Oh! the rain! Yet, we're dumb; For we see her wooing Thither us to come: till, our loss accraing. Greater is the sum

Back to her Creator, It is greater That she go, To the love that wait her. Than God's gift? Ah, no! Pence! a little later,

We shall see it so, -Selected:

VARIETY.

The most intense cold ever known in London was on December 25, 1719. The hottest day was in July, 1808.

Paris, France, has just built a new dead-house and a new flower market; one to blow the other to keep still in.

Female clerks at a salary of $600 per annum, are accorded the preference in employment in Wash-Foreign letters state that St. Petersburg is very gay. Balls abound, and Italian opera is in full General Foster complains of a decaying bone in his leg, which incapacitates him for active service. An hilarious mamma in Nottingham, Eng., is Selections for a Newspaper .- Most people think the selection of suitable matter for a newspaper is an easy part of the business. How great an error. It is by all means the most difficult. To look over a hundred of exchange papers every week from which to select enough for one, especially when the question is not what shall but what shall not be selected, is no easy task. If every person who reads a newspaper could edit it we would hear less complaint. Not unfrequently is it the case that an editor looks over his exchange papers for something interesting, and can absolutely find nothing. Every paper is drier than a contribution box, yet something must be bad-his paper must come out with something in it, and he does the best he can.

IF You MEAN No. SAY No -When a man has made up his mind to do or not to do a thing, he should have the plack to say so plainly and decisively. It is a mistaken kindness-to meet a request you have determined not to grant, with "I'll see about it," or "I cannot give you a positive answer now; call in a few days and I'll let you know." It may be said, perhaps, that the object of these ambiguous expressions is to "let the applicant down easy;" but their tendency is to give him useless trouble and anxiety, and possibly, to prevent his seeking what he acquires in a more propitious quarter until after the golden opportunity has passed. Moreover, it is questionable whether the motives for such equivocation are as philanthropic as some people suppose. Generally speaking, the individual who thus avoids a direct refusal, does so to avoid himself pain. Men without decision of character have an indescribable aversion to say No. They can think no-sometimes when it would be more creditable to their courtesy and benevolence to think Yes-but they dislike to represent their thoughts. They prefer to mislead and deceive. It is true that these bland and considerate people are often spoken of as "very gentlemanly." But is it gentlemanly to keep a man in suspense for days, and perhaps weeks, merely because you do not choose to put him out of it by a straightforward declaration? He is only a gentleman who treats his fellow men in a manly straightforward way. Never seem by any ambiguous word to sanction hopes you do not intend to gratify. If you mean No, out with it.

Wellington and Napoleon no Smokers .- On the evening of his first return from the Peninsula, Wellington was induced to join the circle of smokers at the hotel in Portsmouth at which he put up for the night, and at which the Dake of Cumberland and some field-efficers were also staying. In after life, the Iron Duke described the scene himself. "He sat," he said, " behind the pipe, whiffing away with a feeling of wonder, and watching with interest the countenances of the rest of the company." There were other novices there besides Lord Wellington. One by one these left the room, and did not return. He saw the old smokers were on the look-out for his turn to follow the secoders. As he continued to puff away, he said to himself, "Well, it must come to an end, I suppose;" and it did come to an end before the pipe was finished, and that, too, in such a way that he never attempted to smoke again.

Napoleon's disgust was even more rapidly attained; and yet he was the most inveterate snufftaker of his day. Constant says the Persian Ambassador had presented to the Emperor a magnificent Oriental pipe. After being shown how to operate, he desired Constant to light the pipe. Let Constant tell the rest. "I obeyed, and returned it to him in order. But scarcely had he drawn a mouthful when the smoke, which he knew not how to expel from his mouth, turned back into his palate, penetrated into his throat, and came out by the nose and blinded him. As soon as he recovered breath, he said, . Take that away from me -what an abomination! Oh, the brutes! My stomach is quite upset !' In fact," adds Constant, " he felt himself so much annoyed for more than an hour that he then and there renounced forever all desire to try the experiment again."-Tobacco ; Its Use and Abuse.
